20/12/10 CLICDATA partners with Bearing Point France to implement INFINIS, an innovative Business Intelligence software solution

Bearing Point and ClicData have teamed up to provide a complete Business Intelligence solution to businesses. ClicData proposes Infinis, a software solution that enables rapid reporting and analytics, while Bearing Point lends its services to help implement the tool.

Bearing Point Germany has followed the development of Infinis since its very beginnings, when the product was only a brave idea: a qualitative B.I. tool that is accessible to everyone, regardless of their job title or technical expertise. Today, Infinis has matured into a package of unique B.I. functionalities that offers both business and I.T. users fast implementation, increased productivity and an attractive cost. Convinced by its potential, Bearing Point now proposes Infinis to customers on a regular basis.

Peter Müller of Bearing Point Germany avidly describes his experience with Infinis at pharmaceutical company Sigma Tau, saying "my team said they thought it was amazing on paper and could not quite believe it could work that way until they actually saw it happen: several key corporate data sources put together in a single dynamic report, no technical skills involved, no long weeks of implementation required. That, coupled with the ease of use of the interface, makes Infinis very special software on a tough B.I market. That is why I have now dedicated 2 people from my team to analytics."

In the same way ClicData recommends Bearing Point to any clients that require fast and reliable implementation services for their software solutions. On occasion, ClicData proposes Infinis to companies which have no internal resources to support the implementation, at which point Bearing Point France is able to bring both technical and management skills to the table and to enable the realization of a pilot for the client.

Through this fruitful partnership, ClicData and Bearing Point are able to combine technical innovation with implementation services and offer their clients the best business solutions on the B.I. market today.

“We are very excited to work together with such professional service providers”, says Telmo Silva, the creator of Infinis and President of ClicData. “That support makes Infinis so much more attractive to companies looking for an efficient way to optimize their B.I. activities or industrialize their reporting and analytics.”

About Bearing Point

BearingPoint employs 3,200 highly-skilled consultants whose sound knowledge of their industry and function amply serves their clients’ needs and successes. BearingPoint is known for its client satisfaction as well as for high client retention rates.

About ClicData

ClicData is a French software company based in Lille that provides software solutions and professional consulting services to global customers.

INFINIS, ClicData’s innovative B.I. solution, connects company resources to the internet in order to retrieve information from databases, spreadsheets, text files, web sites, images, videos and blogs. The software finds and manages data from both internal and external data sources, and creates a virtual workspace where this data can be easily viewed and analyzed.
